The toasimaster pointed out the value to members of using the casting platform in Central Park, remarking that in his opinion that success in placing the fly upon the water where you want to put it is 75 per cent. of fly flyhabing. What the master of the dry fly has learned on casting, he said, came from practice on the Central Park platform. "If men would once get upon the platform," he added, "and perhaps get a tip from a man who knows the points wherein they are deficient they would learn more in fifteen minutes than by themselves they could acquire in fifteen years."

Thrilling Swordfish Pictures.

Thrilling Sworifish Pictures.

H. S. Watson showed Field and Stream's channel base fishing on the Jersey coust, black base angling on the Potomac and marlin swordfishing at the Catalina Islands. These reels of pictures run off in fifteen minutes required sometimes a week of watching and waiting to secure. The Jersey coast channel base pictures show Van Campen Hellner's parry at New Inlet, N. J., where at the lide rip Ted Savage, E. F. Warner, Billy Richmend, Bill Smith and others could be seen in their beach togs, fishing for the coppery warrior of the surf.

In great contrast to this fishing was angling for black base on the Potomac, a sport Bob Davis particularly delights in, the magasine editor's cherry countenance not being shown, as Hy Watson explained, because Davis and the others got no base on the first trip, three other trips being necessary.

The most thrilling pictures, of course, were the marlin swordfish films, which depictured James W. Jump of Los Angeles, who holds the world's light tackle record, hooked to a leaping acrobat. The leaps and jumps of Jump's fish drew many ejaculations from the anglers, each man using his pet expression when he feels his fish make its dash, whether it is under the water or in a spectacular way out of the water.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke was scheduled to speak, but because of, an operation performed upon his son he was unable to be present.

Our crowd opened the season of 1920 on the Westchester lakes through 12 inches of solid ice in a dri ing snow-storm. Art Brown, Hig Bill Kaufer and I would not miss a Sunday in the open for a farm. Luck was poor, 5 medium sized pickerel being our reward for a hard day's work.

I caught 1 large mouth bass, which was put back in the water with hopeathat he would call again next July. During the day we made the acquaintance of "R. A. C." and his friends.

This year we hope to make a perfect score by putting in every Sunday on one of the many lakes of the watershed. New York, Jan. 14. PLUG UGLY.
